CREATIVE PLACEMAKING

SUPPORTING ARTS AND CULTURE IN TOLEDO’S NEIGHBORHOODS

THE ARTS COMMISSION
INSPIRING A VIBRANT TOLEDO
Toledo’s Strategic Plan for Arts and Culture (TSPAC) was formally adopted by Toledo City Council in 2015 following a two-year engagement process. The plan identifies ten objectives and eight focus neighborhoods to connect the historic fabric of the downtown Toledo area as the cultural hub of our region.

Following the TSPAC launch, The Arts Commission leveraged funding to build a Creative Placemaking Program to work alongside residents and organizations to form meaningful partnerships, support and elevate cultural activity, and build capacity to shape a more equitable, vibrant future for our city and its residents.

RESPONDING TO COMMUNITY VOICES

TSPAC Objectives

- Education, Youth & Family Engagement
- Image, Marketing & Sense of Place
- Racial, Ethnic & Cultural Diversity
- Arts & Culture in Urban Planning and Development
- Capacity & Stability
- Arts & Culture in Neighborhoods
- Funding
- Collaboration
- Cultural Tourism, Heritage, Anchor Events & Public Art
- Downtown & Maumee River
Creative resident-led engagement drives civic change that inspires reuse of public spaces, creates healthier, safer environments, and increases the vibrancy of our greater community.

The Arts Commission asks to be guests in neighborhoods to work alongside residents, community leaders, and stakeholders. We partner with local artists to celebrate and elevate neighborhood cultural identity while working to identify and address needs with dynamic cross-sector solutions. Through this process, we beautify spaces, increase programming, and inform opportunities for residents to impact economic and service systems that deliver sustainable change.

What We Do:

THROUGH THE ENGAGEMENT PROCESS WE DRIVE OPPORTUNITIES TO:
• Elevate artists and cultural activity in neighborhoods
• Identify and prioritize neighborhood needs and issues
• Support capacity and strategic vision
• Connect resources and relationships
• Increase opportunities for youth to connect to their passion
• Develop new leaders to enter fields of arts administration and community development

The Arts Commission prioritizes diversity, equity, and inclusion. We create space and opportunity for all to contribute to improving our neighborhoods and revitalizing our city through engaging, meaningful, and fun dialogue and creative expression.
Toledo is a nationally known model for Creative Placemaking. The Arts Commission has been recognized by national and regional leaders in arts and community development for our efforts to leverage collaborative partnerships and apply the creative process to civic practice. We have presented our work at the national Americans for the Arts Conference, the Ohio Community Development Conference and many other local and regional conferences.

The Arts Commission has hosted multiple leaders in our field here in Toledo, including executive directors of local arts agencies from around the country for the Americans for the Arts Executive Leadership Forum, the first of its kind to take place outside of its traditional home at Sundance, Utah. Our success in Creative Placemaking methods has been acknowledged in national and regional print and digital publications. Our staff continue to serve on grant panels for the likes of the National Endowment for the Arts and the Ohio Arts Council, among others.

To date, the Creative Placemaking program at The Arts Commission has attracted more than $500,000 in investment to Toledo over a three-year period.
